

Code of Good Practice

We are primarily here to represent non-religious students at the University of Leeds, as well provide a forum for secular discussion and rationalist thinking. We also try to provide regular social events for our members as well. Our commitment to you, other students and the larger community is that we treat everyone with fairness and equality and with respect for their opinions; we also ask this of our members. We are a society that promotes debate that is respectful to all of the involved parties, and we ask our members to work with us on this.

During our social events we promote responsible drinking and responsible behaviour. We do not condone the consumption of illegal substances at any of our events, or partaking in illegal activities as a result of consumption of any intoxicating substance.

Any member— committee or general — who does not comply with the Code of Good Practice will be spoken to by a senior committee member and further action may be taken if appropriate.

We comply with all relevant Leeds University Union social guidelines and Union by-laws.

Kind regards,

James, Michael, Will, and Elettra

Leeds Atheist Society Committee